Mayor Frank Aboussafy Retires

N. E. Frank Aboussafy, the man who has put Coleman in the limelight many times steps down from the office of Mayor this month after having served the town for the past 23 years.

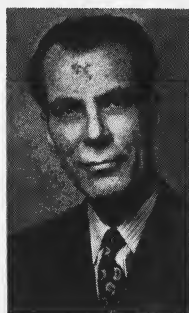

Frank, a leading figure in Alberta Civic politics since the end of 1939 came to Coleman in 1936 and to Alberta in 1911. He came West to Westaskiwin with his family, where his father, Emil Aboussafy opened up and operated a general store which Frank later managed and expanded to three stores. Deciding to go on his own he located in Coleman and taking a liking to this coal mining town and its people he began to expand the store bought from Mr. George Neil.

After 3 years of dealing with the people here, Mr. Aboussafy ran and was elected on council in 1939. He took over the office of Mayor in 1943 and has never been opposed which in itself is a sterling record. Mayor Aboussafy decided to retire this year after nineteen years of service to the town.

During early years of his regime the town purchased Coleman Light and Water Company from the Coal Company. This company of which Frank has been chairman and has been the goose that laid the golden egg for Coleman and after five years the town paid off the money making utility. For six consecutive years, profits realized from the company have made it possible for property owners not to have to pay town taxes. The town gained much publicity over this fact in the Financial Post and many leading United States financial papers who also commended the town on its fine administration and good organization.

Supported by a progressive staff of councillors, Mr. Aboussafy's careful guidance has brought paved streets to over 90% of the town and a recent sidewalk project has resulted in the major sections of town being serviced with concrete sidewalks.

During his long term of office Mayor Aboussafy became President of the Association of Alberta Cities, Towns and Villages and served as a director from 1955 to 1956 on the Federal Mayors Association. He has been chairman of the Chinook Health Unit since two years after it was organized until his retirement. He has also served as president of the South West Alberta Development Association, chairman of the Crossed Pass Towns Committee and was also a director of the Old Man River Planning Commission.

Locally, Frank is a past president of the Coleman Lions Club, an honorary vice-president of the Coleman Legion and is a charter member of the Coleman Board of Trade. He has promoted sport here and was president of the Coleman Canadian Hockey Club in 1938.

Continually battling for the welfare of his people, Mayor Aboussafy has made representations before the Federal Government in Ottawa trying his utmost to see that subventions were maintained and new markets found for the Coal Mines. His many efforts in driving for the gas plant now located west of Coleman can not go unnoticed as besides many local meetings he met and put his influence to the Oil and Gas Conservation Board.

Mr. Aboussafy now retires leaving his town in an enviable position and residents here can take their hats off to a gentleman who has put in many hard years of his life fighting for the betterment of his community.

Mayor Aboussafy has besides his wife, one daughter, Louise and one son Edmund both employed in Calgary, Alberta.

Home & School Meet With Teaching Staff

Coleman Home and School Association held its monthly meeting in the School October 15th, attended by a large number of teachers and parents.

Following the introduction of teachers by Principal Horace Allen, he gave a very interesting talk on the grade nine and high school curriculum. His talk highlighted the great importance of education in today's world of automation when demand for skilled labor in today's working forces is so high that it is vital for a person to have a high school education.

The Home and School decided to discontinue providing cash attendance prizes for class rooms and will supply banners or plaques instead. The money that had been formerly given to the winning room will be used to provide a scholarship for the grade seven and eight classrooms. A lunch was served by the hospitality committee.

Fire In Italian Hall

Coleman Volunteer Fire Brigade's quick response to a call on Tuesday morning of last week at about 8:15 o'clock prevented what could have been a very costly fire. Sparks from the chimney of the Italian hall on Main street, ignited the roof of the building and before the fire had a chance to spread, the brigade was on the scene and extinguished the blaze with very little damage.

The Italian hall is at the west end of the block on main street, and had the fire gotten a chance the west wind that was blowing could have fanned the fire into a serious blaze as all buildings on the block are joined.

Main Street, Coleman

(By H. George Meyer, Associate Editor, The Canadian Canadian).

On Sunday, September 8th, our group left Medicine Hat and travelled the Trans-Canada Highway to Tilley, about fifty miles to the northwest, from which point we travelled over a gravel road to Steveston, situated on the Red River near Patricia. Here the provincial government established a park about four years ago to preserve fossils of bones of dinosaurs and other prehistoric animals, which were discovered shortly after the turn of the century. Our guide through the park was Roy Fowler, park superintendent, who has spent many hours with a well-known archaeologist, Dr. Charles Sternberg, in uncovering well-preserved skeletons of animals which roamed the area about seventy million years ago. These skeletons are left where they are buried in the rock, rather than being removed and reassembled. There are four or five sites where bones have been discovered and are now protected with small glassed-in shelters, enabling the tourist to see the handiwork of the archaeologists.

In the same park is an old log house, the home of one of Alberta's famous early cowboys, John Ware, a colored man who is best known as "Nigger John" or "Happy Jack." This cabin was situated at the top of the valley on Ware's ranch, but in recent years the Brooks Kinsmen Club undertook to take the cabin apart, log by log, numbering each piece, and reassemble it in the river valley within the confines of the park.

Beside this cabin, and within it, are many items made and used by the early cowboys, as well as a collection of fossils and photographs of the early excavation of dinosaur bones.

The park also has camping facilities and playgrounds for the kids. While the road from Brooks to the park is rough and dusty at present, a new road is under construction and when completed, more and more will be heard of this relatively new park (if seventy-million-year-old dinosaur bones can be referred to as "new").

Following the tour of the park, party members were the luncheon guests of the Brooks Chamber of Commerce. This community of about 2500 is located 70 miles north-west of Medicine Hat in the heart of the irrigation country. It is famous for its abundance of upland game birds in the fall, and it is the home of famous Nanley's potato chips, one of the newer industries in the town, where up to 100 tons of potatoes are processed every month.

The next stop on our tour was Drumheller, which we reached by travelling north over a gravel road from Bassano. We entered Drumheller Valley near East Coulee, where two coal mines are still in operation, having survived the slump in the coal business that virtually changed the Drumheller area from a coal mining community to a tourist centre. This latter industry — tourism — is becoming bigger every year, thanks to the efforts of a few Drumheller residents who refused to say "die" and leave Drumheller a ghost town, when the mines closed down. The results of their promotions are illustrated in the fact that over 40,000 tourists visited the Drumheller Badlands during the past season. This same group has formed a museum association. In the past two years they have seen the building of a new museum, the highlight of which is the skeleton of a prehistoric monster known as the duckbilled dinosaur, Edmontosaurus variety, reconstructed from bone fossils found in the Drumheller Valley. Also on display in the museum, besides innumerable other fossils, are world-famous juniper carvings done by Wilfred G. Hodgson of Dorothy, Alberta.

The Drumheller Chamber of Commerce members were hosts for a banquet Sunday evening, and following this members of our party enjoyed a film on dinosaur hunting at the museum, and a visit with Dr. Wes Read, president of the museum association, Mrs. Irene McVeigh, curator of the museum, Mayor E. Toschach and other promoters of tourism in Drumheller.

The next day, Monday, we left for Lacombe and Red Deer, and our visits here, as well as in Rocky Mountain House, will be covered in the next article of this series.

Credit Union Day Celebrations

HAMILTON, Ont.—A letter from Prime Minister John G. Diefenbaker is proudly displayed this week in several thousand credit union offices across Canada.

It salutes the country's 2,700,000 credit union members on the occasion of International Credit Union Day, celebrated annually on the third Thursday in October. Extending his greetings for this special day, the prime minister comments that the "expansion of credit unions in Canada affords strong evidence of the worthwhile functions that are being performed by them."

In the expansion noted by Mr. Diefenbaker, Canadian credit unions last year extended their membership to an additional 200,000 people — a 6 per cent increase; increased their savings by 12.3 per cent—another $147.6 million; and boosted their assets by 13.3 per cent or $169.6 million.

The prime minister's greetings & best wishes to credit union people were sent to the Canadian office of the Credit Union National Association (CUNA) in Hamilton, Ont., and CUNA mailed a facsimile to each of the country's 4600 credit unions.

Robert Ingram, CUNA's Canadian manager, says the growth of credit unions across the country since January suggests a record year in the movement's development. By the end of 1962 he predicts, there should be more than 3 million Canadians enjoying the thrift and loan services of credit unions they own and operate themselves.

Even with normal growth, credit union assets should exceed $1.65 billions by year's end, and members' savings should reach the $1.5 million mark. Money loaned to credit union members, Mr. Ingram points out, comes from the savings of other members.

Besides contributing to the Canadian economy by encouraging thrift and providing low-cost loans, credit union people here have helped to extend this self-help program to many other countries. Through membership in CUNA, the international credit union body, they share in a world extension program that is currently aiding groups in more than 80 countries to develop their own credit unions.

Earlier this year, credit union people in Saskatchewan raised $14,500 to develop the credit union movement in Tanganyika. The project originated to celebrate the silver anniversary of the credit union movement in Saskatchewan. Credit union leaders there described it as a fitting way to give thanks for the benefits they had received from the movement, by helping to extend it to an area where it was greatly needed.

Olaf Spetland, CUNA's World Extension director, who suggested the Tanganyika project to Saskatchewan, says the emerging African nations particularly need credit unions, both for their economic services and the democratic training they provide. This kind of help is vital to the development of Africa, says Spetland, and even a little help now will be far more effective than aid given in a few years' time.

Joseph Mutayoba, of Dar es Salaam, Tanganyika, is currently in Saskatchewan studying the organization and operation of credit unions, and will go to CUNA's international headquarters in Madison, Wisconsin, for further training before returning home to work to develop credit unions throughout his country.

Dr. E. W. Gilchrist Veterinary Officer

Dr. Lawrence E. Kindt, M.P., advises that Dr. Ernest W. Gilchrist

has been selected by competitive examination to assume responsibility for animal disease control in the newly-established Health of Animals Sub-district of Fort Macleod. The new Sub-district will include the Municipal Districts of Willow Creek No. 26, Pincher Creek No. 9 and Improvements District Nos. 8 and 27.

Dr. Gilchrist who comes to Fort Macleod from Stettler, will occupy an office in Fort Macleod. He is an experienced Veterinary Officer, is married, has a family of two and is building a new home at Fort Macleod.

It is very advantageous to southwestern Alberta to have this office centrally located to our livestock population, so that outbreaks of contagious diseases can be promptarians in the Health of Animals ly dealt with and disease eradication programs carried on. Veterinarians in the Health of Animals Division are always on the alert for diseases that do not presently exist in Canada.

Dr. Gilchrist's first task at Fort Macleod will be to organize and supervise the initial test of cattle for brucellosis in the M.D. of Willow Creek No. 26. This test will be carried out under the Health of Animals Division brucellosis control program. Testing will commence towards the end of October and it is expected that seven technicians will be collecting blood samples. All susceptible cattle in the area will be tested and reactors will be ordered slaughtered. The Federal Government will pay compensation for the reactors.

With a Sub-District at Fort Macleod, it will be more convenient to have export health charts endorsed. In accordance with the United States Import Requirements, health certificates must be endorsed by a full time veterinarian employed by the Health of Animals Division.

Dr. Gilchrist will make an investigation on the feeding of garbage to swine and poultry. To prevent the spread of disease, owners who feed offal or collected garbage to swine or poultry must have a permit from Dr. F. K. Wells, Veterinary Director General, Ottawa.

Increasing Use of National Employment Service

"The increasing use of the National Employment Service by employers is seen in the fact that almost 74 per cent of urban employers are now making use of the NES in the prairie region." W. C. Stewart of Winnipeg, assistant regional director of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, said here last week. He is visiting the National Employment Office in Blairmore.

Placements made by the National Employment Service in the prairie region this year, to the end of September, total 184,500, an increase of 16 per cent over NES placements during the same period a year ago, said the U.I.C. official.

Mr. Stewart described lumbering in the area as "very buoyant" and that men were being recalled through NES for the woods operations. Oil wells are being drilled in the Fernie area which is also providing some employment.

Referring to the forthcoming Winter Employment Campaign, the U.I.C. official appealed for the support of business, industry and householder alike "to create all the employment possible during the winter season." He said that many municipalities planned to undertake projects under the Municipal Winter Works Incentive Program. The Federal Government offers to pay half the direct payroll costs of a municipality on approved projects from Oct. 15, 1962 to April 30, 1963. A total of 5,800,000 man-days of work was provided for 148,000 men at on-site jobs under last winter's program, said Mr. Stewart.
